Evotech in good health as company wins NHS approved contractor status

Building maintenance specialist, Evolution Technical Services Ltd (Evotech), has been awarded approved contractor status by the North of England Commercial Procurement Collaborative (NOE CPC) for both electrical and mechanical, installation and maintenance services, after a competitive tender process for inclusion on its FM, Property and Business Services Framework.

Established in 2007, and wholly owned by the NHS, NOE CPC provides collaborative and bespoke procurement solutions to the NHS and other public sector organisations. Through category expertise and by harnessing collective buying power they deliver award winning, comprehensive, compliant, and innovative procurement solutions which save the NHS money.

The framework provides NHS organisations with a compliant route to market and gives access to a wide range of specialist services, with its approved suppliers having knowledge and experience of working in a healthcare environment.

Evotech's Managing Director, Mark O'Grady said: "I'm delighted that Evotech has been awarded approved supplier status, for both electrical works and heating and plumbing systems on this prominent NHS framework. Our business is constantly evolving, with the addition of new services and technical innovations, and we look forward to further developing our relationship with NOE CPC and supporting its NHS and public sector client base, over the coming years. By providing high quality services and expertise, maintaining, and updating electrical and mechanical systems, we will ultimately help NHS organisations remain compliant, save money and reduce carbon emissions."

Evotech provides high quality, innovative building maintenance services and has the in-house ability to design bespoke engineering solutions. Focusing on helping customers maintain their buildings and improve their working environments, whilst reducing carbon emissions and minimising running costs, the estate the company maintains includes NHS and public sector buildings, schools, colleges and university facilities, commercial office space, shopping centres, leisure complexes and rented residential units across the UK.

Imran Ahmed, Category Manager - FM, Property and Business Services at NOE CPC said, "We are incredibly proud of the service NOE CPC delivers and the expertise of our team. We are delighted when organisations meet the high standards required and support us to create unique frameworks, such as Estates Maintenance and Engineering Services, offering the NHS access to a large number of truly specialist maintenance services providers."
